Good news - electric costs to go down in October

The Florida Public Service Commission has established fuel adjustment changes that will change customer costs from Florida's investor-owned electric utilities for the next six months.

Beginning in October, a residential customer of Florida Power and Light Company, using 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity, will pay $3.70 less per month, with the electric bill decreasing from $78.03 to $74.33.

The fuel adjustment charge is a charge that is established by the Florida Public Service Commission every six months to reflect rising or falling fuel costs. Utilities are allowed to recover all their prudently incurred fuel-related costs.

Youth building picnic tables

Residents of the Pahokee Youth Development Center involved in the Vocational Technical class have been busy building picnic tables for Pahokee's picnic and campground area.

"All materials were provided by the city. The residents donated their labor in order to fulfill community service," said Alice Thompson, community relations director.

Individual picnic tables will be built upon request for a small donation of $12, along with the necessary materials.

Dr. Louis Robinson, principal of the facility, invites others from the community to contact the school for other wood-working projects under consideration.

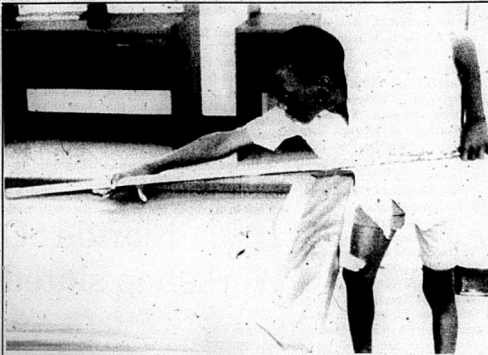

For information or to place an order call the school at 924-5922 and ask for the vocational technical instructor, or leave a message with the receptionist.

Woman dies after car flips into canal off Hatton Highway

By Brenda Bunting Editor

A 19-year-old Pahokee woman died Monday morning about 10:30 a.m. when the car she was riding in flipped into a canal on Hatton Highway, about 10 miles east of Belle Glade.

Tara Frost was a passenger in the car driven by Early Reddick Jr. when the 1987 Mercury veered off the road onto the east shoulder, then crossed the highway onto the west shoulder of the road and flipped into a canal.

Housing values in Belle Glade are up

Good news for residents in Belle Glade looking at their home as an investment - your home value may have gone up by as much as 3.98 percent. The bad news is you'll pay higher taxes on your home even though the city is not raising the proposed millage rate. The increase depends upon how the property appraiser's office values your home.

The city commission and staff met Monday night at city hall and approved the 1997/98 budget. The eight and a half million dollar budget includes a five percent raise for city employees and $20,000 to hire marketing representatives to promote the city's planned business park. The police department budget went down 6.9 percent to reflect the loss of a federal grant that expires in July 1998. The fire department budget is also down 7.5 percent and recreation is down 9.2 percent. Administration costs are up by 0.4 percent.

According to Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Gary Paleveda, Miss Frost was not wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident. Mr. Reddick, 31, was not injured in the accident. Both resided at 732 Whidden Road in Pahokee.

Finance Director Dave Wood said the budget process went smoothly this year and the only big change was the addition of the 5% pay raise for all city employees. The city has been able to give the raises

Is the fire department moving to the wrong side of the tracks?

Group circulating petition to stop Fire Dept. move

By Brenda Bunting Editor

If you live on the wrong side of the tracks in Pahokee it could mean being cut off from fire protection - if there's a train on that track. So says a group in Pahokee protesting the city's plan to contract fire protection to the county and move the existing fire department off North Lake Avenue to Farmer's Market Road.

Canal Point's fire emergency response would also be taken care of by the new station instead of their volunteer fire department.

City Manager Ken Schenck and Fire Chief Gary Burroughs both say it's a win/win situation for the city and the residents. Pahokee residents Larry Wright and Alvis Davis say it's a dangerous trade-off which could leave residents in the city with a delayed response time.

Wright and Davis are circulating a "Petition for Protection" throughout the city and have obtained over 600 signatures in less than a week. Their goal is to present 1,000 signatures to city commissioners at the Aug. 26 Pahokee Commission meeting.

"This makes no sense...except for the bottom line for the county," says Wright. "Total lack of concern for human life has made this an issue."

Wright contends that putting the fire department on Farmer's Market Road, on the other side of the railroad tracks, could possibly cause a delay for fire trucks responding to a fire inside the City of Pahokee if a train were on the tracks at the time of the call.

Fire Chief Burroughs said that won't be a problem and in the almost 15 years he has been with the fire department, he has never encountered or been delayed by a train on the tracks while responding to a fire.

He said the majority of the population of Pahokee and Canal Point will have a three minute response time.

He also said the fire department has an agreement with U.S. Sugar, who uses the tracks to haul sugar cane to their Bryant Mill, to either stop a train or to uncouple cars if they are on a crossing when fire rescue personnel must get through.

Judy Sanchez, public relations director with U.S. Sugar agreed they have an iron clad agreement with the city to do this. "We certainly wouldn't allow our cane cars to endanger anyone's life," she said.

U.S. Sugar uses the FEC track owned by South Central Florida Express during the cane season, October through March. She said in checking the records, the busiest day shown was eight trains in a 24-hour period and they were not long trains.

Chief Burroughs also noted there are four crossing sites the fire department can use to get back into the city if there is a fire and response time will be better under the county system.

Currently, the city is operating with three fire trucks. One is a 1975 Ford Pumper and another is a 1978 American la France. "They're really ready for pasture," said Burroughs. The newest is a 1991 Pierce truck. At times the city currently only has one firefighter per truck. Under the county contract there would be two per truck.

The county will pay for the new firehouse, although the city will do the work. The county will purchase a $200,000 fire truck, an updated radio system and more firefighters will be used. "The firefighters will also get raises, something they haven't had in years," noted Burroughs.

Schenck said the commission is currently in the negotiation stage with Palm Beach County and an agreement may be signed by October 1.

"In order for the city to match what the county is offering in services we would have to raise taxes by 13%," said Schenck.

Dept. of Juvenile Justice awards grant to Glades Glen

Secretary Calvin Ross of the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice announced the awarding of $249,551 (of the $4.9 million in statewide partnership grants) to seven community-based organizations in District 9, representing Palm Beach County, for the 1997-98 fiscal year.

Included in the grant funding is a $54,536 grant to Glades Glen Youth Enrichment Academy at the Glades Glen housing center in Belle Glade. The grant goes to the Housing Partnership, Inc. at Glades Glen to help reduce school truancy and provide out-of-school enrichment services for up to 50 middle and high school age youth, living at Glades Glen, the 715 Mobile Home Trailer Park and the Belle Glade Housing Authority's Okeechobee Center.

The three major goals of the program are: reduction of truancy, reduction of school disciplinary referrals, and reduction of juvenile crime.

The Community Juvenile Partnership Grant Program is funded through the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Trust Fund by receiving 42-cents of every $1 license tag fee assessed for the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Trust Fund. The program funds prevention and intervention programs that must target one of the following: reduction in juvenile crime, reduction in truancy, reduction of in-school and out-of-school suspensions and expulsions, and the enhancement of school safety.

The program also requires partnerships among local law enforcement, education, juvenile justice, and children and family services.

A little means a lot

By Mike Lyons

The high temperature the other day reached a warm 92 degrees. Today (Aug. 18) the forecast predicts the temperature will peak at 90 degrees. Chances are not many of us will notice the difference. If, on the other hand, the mercury only reached the middle 70s, then we would take note.

Yet, in the equatorial waters of the Pacific Ocean, the temperature has been slowly rising all summer long. It is only a one or two degree increase in sea surface temperature, but that is enough to have a profound impact on the world's weather.

Those two degrees will likely increase the amount of rain in Florida during the coming winter, reduce the number of hurricanes forming in the Atlantic this summer and mean fewer tornadoes in Tornado Alley next spring.

Two degrees may not mean much to you and me, but two degrees are enough to produce major changes in world weather patterns. It is called the El Nino and this year's may be one of the strongest in years.

"This year's El Nino is similar to the strong events of 1957, 1972 and 1982-83," said Ants Letmaa, the director of the Climate Prediction Center.

Mike Lyons

The El Nino occurs when warm Pacific water moves eastward toward the central part of the ocean. The warmer than normal sea surface temperatures cause changes in circulation patterns around the world.

These changes bring cooler, wetter weather for the southern half of the United States, and above normal temperatures for the northern half of the country. Elsewhere, Peru experiences warmer weather while drought may affect Brazil, part of Africa and the western Pacific.

"Here in Florida, the El Nino means a wet, windy and slightly cooler winter," said Jim Lushine, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Miami. "More low pressure systems form in the Gulf of Mexico during El Nino years, producing more rain for us."

While it may be a wetter winter, the El Nino may mean fewer hurricanes this summer. "The El Nino changes the shear in the environment where hurricanes are trying to grow out in the Atlantic," said Dr. James O'Brien of Florida State University.

During the El Nino years of 1957, 1972 and 1983, tropical storm development was well below average. Six named storms formed in 1957 while there were only four storms in both 1972 and 1983. The average is ten storms.

Next spring may not be as violent in Tornado Alley because of the El Nino. Researchers at Florida State University have discovered the El Nino produces a "significant reduction" in tornadoes in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas.

"Most reports of El Nino are about disasters," said O'Brien. "In the case of U.S. tornadoes, El Nino is a positive factor."

That the El Nino is a factor at all is most amazing. A one to two degree difference in water temperature half a world away means more rain here, fewer hurricanes in the Atlantic, and a quiet spring in the southwest.

FISHING WITH WALT REYNOLDS

don't have a visual reference to go by. That is where the fish locator becomes a necessity. With a good locator, such as a Humminbird Paramount, you can literally see what is below you. This includes fish that are holding on drop-offs and humps.

This ability to see where the fish are holding and at what depth is the most important information that you can have on the water. Once you know the depth and what kind of structure they are holding on, you can decide what type of lure to use for a proper presentation. For example, if the fish were holding on a drop-off about 20 feet deep, but were suspended at 10 feet deep, it would probably not be a good time to fish a bottom type bait. Rather, it would be better to try a top water or crank bait that will allow the fish to see it better.

Lures are simply tools to allow you to make a presentation that whereby the fish can find what they think is something to eat. In order to make this decision on what lure to use, you first have to know where the fish are. In open water fishing, the locator becomes your eye under the surface.

Any time you are moving about the lake you should pay attention to the depth and in particular, any sudden changes in depth, as these are the areas that fish will hold. If you make it a habit to watch your locator, you will start to notice an increase in the number of successful trips you have.

To all a good bite...

1997 Florida Organic Farming Workshop slated for September 5

The University of Florida Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences is sponsoring the second annual Florida Organic Farming Workshop on Friday, September 5. The workshop will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the UF/IFAS-Citrus Research and Education Center in Lake Alfred.

The workshop is designed for both commercial organic fruit and vegetable growers and those interested in organic farming, gardening and community-based agriculture, said Jim Ferguson, UF/IFAS extension horticulturist in the horticultural sciences department at Gainesville and workshop coordinator.

"According to industry sources, organic food production is increasing by approximately 20 percent per year nationwide," Ferguson said. "It is a rapidly growing specialty market, particularly for consumers concerned about food quality and the environmental impact of synthetic agricultural chemicals."

The workshop will include general and concurrent sessions on a range of topics, including biological control in Florida vegetable production, citrus and vegetable disease identification, management of soil-borne pathogens, organic certification and national standards, organic fertilizers and manures, transition from conventional to organic farming, wholesale marketing and further development of Florida's organic farming industry. For more information, contact Ferguson by phone at 352-392-1996, ext. 302; by fax at 352-392-5653; or by e-mail at jifn@gvn.ifas.ufl.edu.

Hunters under 16 exempt from hunter education

Young Florida hunters don't need to take the state sponsored Hunter Education course until they need a hunting license at age 16. The new exemption became law in January.

Those born on or after June 1, 1975 must still take the free course regardless of their age to qualify for a license, said Lt. Lynne Hawk, Everglades regional hunter education officer, Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFC).

"Many parents will probably still want their young hunters to attend a safety class," Hawk said.

Approximately 10,000 Florida hunters enroll in hunter education classes each year, according to Hawk. She said the courses are taught by volunteer instructors trained and supervised by the GFC.

Topics covered include: wildlife management, wildlife identification and wilderness survival, along with other outdoor skills. Outdoor ethics and gun safety are also stressed.

The hunter education course includes a minimum of 12 hours of classroom instruction and several hours on the shooting range. Participants learn to use rifles, shotguns, muzzle-loaders and bows.

Individuals interested in the GFC Hunter Safety course may call the GFC Regional Office in West Palm Beach at: 561-640-6100.

Acne problems more than skin deep for teenagers

Anxiety over condition may affect academic performance, social interaction

So often teenagers across the country will be returning to school, and many will be concerned about facing their peers because of a common skin condition - acne. Emphasizing that acne is more than just a cosmetic problem, The American Counseling Association is urging teenagers and their parents to consult a physician for medical treatment of moderate to severe cases of acne. Seeking treatment now can improve the condition before teens return to school.

"Acne is more than just a source of minor embarrassment for teenagers," said Dr. Gail Robinson, immediate past president of the American Counseling Association. "Many teenagers with acne have a negative self-image, which can lead to withdrawal from friends and activities, inappropriate behavior and poor academic performance. Resolving their anxiety over acne is important to starting the school year with the confidence they need to succeed socially and academically."

About 85 percent of people between the ages of 12 to 25 develop acne, and discussions during medical examinations reveal acne can have serious effects on the psyche. Acne patients have expressed problems with:

- self-esteem/self-confidence
- body image
- anger
- embarrassment leading to social avoidance
- lifestyle limitations
- difficulties with family members

•depression

"Being a teenager is difficult enough, but the stigma of 'bad skin' often compounds the situation, especially at a time that is so critical to growth," said Dr. Robinson. "Consulting a physician for treatment is the first place to start, but we also need to encourage teens not to feel embarrassed by having acne or to feel so pressured by society's emphasis on looks."

Acne develops when the hair follicles become clogged by skin cells that block the opening of pores. While over-the-counter medications may work for mild cases of acne, more difficult cases usually require prescription antibiotics, both topical and oral.

According to Dr. Diane Berson, associate clinical professor of New York University School of Medicine, "There are prescription medications available that if administered now can substantially improve difficult cases of acne before students go back to school. One topical medication, Benzamycin, combines an antibiotic with an antibacterial agent. This combination has been shown to be more effective than either medication used individually and to produce results in as little as two weeks." As with other topical acne medications, local irritation has been reported with Benzamycin use.

If a person is concerned about or feels personally affected by acne, it is important to seek the advice of a doctor who can help address individual skin care needs and provide appropriate therapy.

Heartburn May Be More Than Just A Pain... It Can Affect Quality Of Life, Too!

(DM)-Having trouble sleeping through the night? Feeling somewhat depressed or anxious lately? Lack your usual energy during the day? If the answer to one or more of these questions is yes, ask yourself whether you also experience the discomfort of heartburn either at night, following meals or both. If so, you may have a condition known as gastroesophageal reflux disease or GERD. GERD is caused by acid reflux or the "backing up" of stomach acid into the esophagus. This acid can be irritating and cause heartburn pain. Other symptoms may include hoarseness, chronic cough or even asthma.

Recent studies have shown that people with GERD generally experience a poorer quality of life than their healthier counterparts. They tend to wake up several times during the night, experience mood swings, derive less pleasure from socializing with family and friends, and often complain of feeling sick.

Many of these people have turned to using popular over-the-counter medications, like antacids or the newer H<sub>2</sub> blockers, according to Sheldon Sloan, M.D., director of the Gastrointestinal Medical Laboratory at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago. "Patients may experience some relief of heartburn symptoms with these drugs," states Dr. Sloan. "But many times these medications aren't enough, and patients may have breakthrough symptoms that wake them up at night. The lack of a good night's sleep will certainly affect their vitality and mood the next day, especially if this is a regular occurrence."

A number of people with heartburn may actually have a more serious condition known as erosive esophagitis, which is caused by the acid damaging the esophagus. Patients may develop bleeding, esophageal ulcers or scar tissue that makes swallowing more difficult. These people may need to be treated with a prescription acid-blocking medication, such as PREVACID® (lansoprazole, TAP Holding, Inc.). In the vast majority of patients, PREVACID has been known to be highly effective in healing the esophagus and relieving the symptoms associated with acid reflux.

Treatment with a medication like PREVACID has been shown to result in improvement on a number of quality of life measurements," continued Dr. Sloan. "Some of my patients tell me they haven't slept this well in years, or that they now feel a renewed energy and pleasure in life."

So, if you are currently taking over-the-counter heartburn medications on a regular basis, and still experience many of the same symptoms, ask your doctor whether you need a more effective prescription medication. You may just find this gives you a new, brighter outlook on life...and perhaps a better night's sleep.

Diabetics: A Threat To You?

(NAPS)-Half of the 16 million people in the United States who have diabetes are not aware they have it.

Diabetics has many symptoms including increased thirst, excessive urination, weight loss and excessive sweating. There are also complications, such as loss of vision, heart problems, hypertension, kidney failure, and lower limb amputation.

Doctors point out that nerve damage can bring about loss of sensitivity in the feet, contributing to ulcers, infection and gangrene, such as an ingrown nail or a blister. Left untreated, and without unimpeded blood flow to the foot, such problems can quickly develop into ulceration, infection and gangrene.

It is estimated that 54,000 lower extremity amputations occur annually among people with diabetes. More than half of them, perhaps as many as three quarters could be prevented by good personal management of diet, hygiene, and exercise habits, and professional foot care attention.

Role of Podiatric Physician
The doctor of podiatric medicine is a highly trained physician with skills in early recognition of diabetic foot disease. Because it is frequently the most serious condition treated by podiatric physicians, their training stresses salvage of the foot rather than amputation.

Diabetic foot disease may include neuropathy, vascular disease, and increased susceptibility to infection. Something as trivial as poorly fitted shoes, can create a wound which, left untreated since the pain normally associated with the wound cannot be felt by the person with diabetes, can become infected.

For the person with diabetes a number of practices and precautions should be employed. Regular visits to a podiatric physician for foot inspections, no less than once a year, in which the doctor may conduct specific diagnostic tests to assess the progress of the disease, are vital.

FAMILY FUN

(NAPS)-Heeding these tips can help make the journey a good part of the vacation fun.

• Take a realistic travel schedule. Rushing from place to place limits rest stops and creates a stressful atmosphere. Allow extra time not just for rest stops, but for spontaneous visits to points of interest and roadside attractions.

• Take the two-lane road instead of the Interstate. Often, the slower pace of driving a two-lane road is more relaxing. Many smaller roads offer ample opportunities for families to take "play breaks"—brief stops to stretch muscles and burn off pent-up energy.

• Great road trip memories are found in unusual places. Try trading fast food and gas mart stops for visits to county museums, drug store soda fountains, small town cafes, and road-side bits of Americana.

• Bring a supply of travel games and other diversions to keep passengers occupied. Pack an activity kit for each child that includes a variety of small, inexpensive items, crayons, paper, games that help pass the time while traveling and after reaching the vacation destination.

• Children aren't the only ones with limited tolerance for vehicle travel. To stay alert, the driver should stop about every two hours to get out of the vehicle and stretch, walk around, and get the circulation going again.

THE SUN SPEAK OUT!

996-6636

To voice your opinion on any subject, call Speak Out at 996-6636, 24 hours a day. Readers can use this special number to pose questions, voice complaints, express opinions or pat somebody on the back. Unlike letters to the editor, Speak Out is designed for anonymous expression of opinions. We edit calls for clarity, brevity, relevance and fairness.

Finney shouldn't be running for city commission

"I think that it's a joke that Lester Finney is running for a seat on the city commission. The man doesn't even know how to run his own business yet he wants to help do things with our community.

He says in last week's edition of The Sun that he is a servant of God and a small servant of the community' and he wants to expand his abilities to be a 'servant of the whole community'.

He needs to worry about running his own business instead of doing anything with our commission."

Editor's note: The Speak Out above was edited for fairness while hopefully, retaining the caller's message. Candidates for political office are fair game for comment in our Speak Out section up to the week before the election, but callers are asked to keep their comments relative to the issues which would determine whether or not a candidate has the qualifications for the job he or she seeks. Candidates are welcome to respond to caller's concerns and this is why comments will not be printed just before an election. This allows time for candidates to respond to any concerns.

Show courtesy to callers

"I am a very affronted caller who wants to make a point. If someone calls your home by mistake and it's a wrong number and that call was not meant for you, I don't think it's fair that person should be cursed out and called racial names.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

The children of the Western Communities and The Coalition for Children are indebted to you and others for your assistance in obtaining the donation of musical instruments for their use. As you are aware free musical instruction is provided.

To date, through purchase and donations, approximately 25 instruments have been procured.

As stated by Ken Jackson of Street Beat, Inc. with whom CFC is cooperating in this endeavor: "I would also like to take this opportunity to ask for your continued support. There are too many kids lacking because of poverty/not living with their parents for one reason or another. Together we can try to reach these kids via the arts. I believe we can help to offer them a path that makes believing in themselves and dreaming a part of their daily lives."

The securing of musical instruments is an ongoing program.

We are also, among others, working with Communities in Schools to promote a Mentor Program in the schools of the Western Communities, a program so dear to my heart.

We are enclosing an appeal for volunteers for this program. You have been so kind and cooperative in the past, can you provide the publicity to help make the Mentor Program a success? You and your newspaper fulfill a great need.

Sincerely,
Herb Fine
 Coalition for Children

Editor's note: We're always glad to give publicity to such a worthwhile project such as yours. We have included your news in our "News Briefs" section this week. We sincerely hope volunteers will come forward to help with your mentoring program.

Dear Editor:

Perhaps you have read the article in the August 14, 1997 edition of the Palm Beach Post about little-old Pahokee losing her fire department.

Citizens have started a campaign to force debate and a vote on this travesty and its consequences. Our lives and safety are at stake. Our fire department has done a great job over the years in protecting our property and lives. It is located "smack-dab-in-the-middle" of town and has easy access to all neighborhoods. If the county takes over and moves the new facility to the location they propose, their response time will nearly double to most locations in Pahokee, although the few people who live in the unincorporated areas and the new prison will benefit greatly.

The only way into Pahokee from the proposed sight is over a railroad track which is heavily traveled and quite often blocked by very long cane trains on their way to the mills. How can the city and county even possibly think about cutting our homes and businesses off from their facility?

Help...what can you do for us?

Back to school safety tips from the Florida Sheriffs Association

- By Tom Berlinger
 Director of Operational Services
- Well, it's that time of the year again! It's the time that both veteran students and young "first-timers" begin a school year that will end some time next summer.
- Are there some special safety and security issues that parents need to concern themselves with at the start of the school year? You bet there are. While this list does not address every possible concern, it's a great checklist that parents and children can follow to make sure that they're using basic safety techniques.
- FOR CHILDREN
- Work out a safe route to and from school with the aid of your parents. Routes should be planned to minimize street crossings, with attention paid to those crossings where a crossing guard is present. Avoid parks, vacant lots, and open fields where there are not many people around on a regular basis.
  - If you're walking, try to travel with a brother or sister, friend or neighbor when possible.
  - Memorize your home address and telephone number and the telephone number of a parent at work. Learn how to use 911, and do not hesitate to call 911 when you think you need to do so.
  - Never talk to strangers or accept gifts or rides from strangers.
  - If a stranger asks you to help them "look for their lost dog or cat," tell them you are sorry you cannot help, because your parents are expecting you home immediately. Then, head for home or some other safe place.
  - If you bike or skateboard to school, always wear a helmet.
  - If you're home alone after school, check in with a parent or neighbor as soon as you walk in the door.
  - Call your parents or a trusted adult friend if you plan to stay late after school.
  - If you see anyone doing something that makes you uneasy or you think isn't right, like a stranger hanging around a playground, a bigger kid bullying around younger children; vandalism, report it to a teacher, your parents, or another trusted adult.
- FOR PARENTS
- Check the safety list for children which has been presented, and do what you can to ensure that they can comply with all of the safety tips which are recommended.
  - Teach children to obey all traffic signals, whether walking, biking or riding the bus, and remind them of the special hazards associated with bad weather.
  - When carpooling, deliver and pick up children as close to school as possible.
  - If your child is home alone for a few hours after school, set up rules for locking doors and windows; answering the door or the telephone; and the allowable activities. Agree on rules governing having friends visit while no adult is at home.
  - Take time to talk with your child and listen closely to their concerns, feelings and fears about people or places that scare them, or make them feel uneasy. Tell them to trust their instincts. And, take complaints about bullies and other safety concerns seriously.

Girls Scouts & Brownies tour Miami Museum of Science

July 26 was a busy day for the Girl Scouts of Troops 805 and 901. Six Brownies from 901, six Juniors from 805, and nine adults met at 7:45 a.m. at the Tri-Rail Station in West Palm Beach. They boarded the 8 a.m. train to Miami where they transferred to Metro-Rail which took them to the Miami Museum of Science and Space Transit Planetarium.

After the two hour train ride, the girls were ready for some adventure, and they were not disappointed. The museum was filled with rooms of hands-on experiments for the girls to try. They ranged from the human circulatory system, to weather, to computers.

They toured the outside exhibits and saw some very large turtles and many endangered species of birds. Inside, they watched a show on electricity and saw two shows in the planetarium. One was on the different types of galaxies in the universe and the other was how to find the different constellations in the night sky. They also learned a little about Mars.

By 5:30 p.m. the girls and adults were ready to return to the Metro-Rail platform. It had been a long, but interesting day.

Speak Out

This happened to me over the weekend. I was calling long distance trying to reach my sister-in-law who has been very ill.

Unfortunately, I dialed the wrong number in the City of Pahokee and a gentleman berated me very, very unkindly. However, instead of calling that person back and cursing him out, I hit my redial button and let him know that Jesus does love him also.

I just want everyone within the tri-cities of Belle Glade, Pahokee and South Bay to know that if someone calls a wrong number, you don't have to hit Star 69 and call back and be rude, you can say "I was returning a call that I received at my number" and see if someone did indeed call you.

We all make mistakes and sometimes make calls in error. Thank you."

High tech classrooms and human understanding

By Rev. Thomas J. McWeeney, Director of The Christophers

I was a graduate student when I first started having one of those recurring nightmares that can haunt anyone who faces daily deadlines while being overwhelmed by the new technology.

Like a surreal scene from Kafka, I'd always be running about the campus trying to locate a media technician who might know the password to my computer that I had forgotten. Without that word my term paper would be held hostage in Cyberspace and I'd flunk the course.

Of course, the outcome was always the same. The paper never made it to the teacher's desk. And, as with all nightmares, I'd wake in a rush of cold sweat.

That dream could easily become a commonplace reality for any of us who lag behind technology. Or allow technology to rule us. Knowledge of computer technology and the information it spews out has become increasingly vital. Technology now touches nearly every aspect of daily life - from education to entertainment to the workplace. And each development brings social, economic, and political changes that can help, or hinder us. Even those of us who don't know RAM from ROM.

But what eventually helped me shake the specter of that nightmare was the realization that the swiftness and efficiency with which we can now access and communicate ideas will never take the place of the moment of connection when a human being forms an idea.

The eloquent syndicated columnist Ellen Goodman puts it this way: "No matter how often we update, no matter how many megabytes we add, it still takes as long as ever to form an insight or allay an anxiety. The good news: We're still the only software that won't become obsolete."

That's good to remember as children head off to school this year. Most schools, at least in districts that can afford it, are planning or expanding their use of technology. Back in my hometown in Erie, Pennsylvania, one affluent parish is adding a 1.5 million dollar computer wing to its elementary school.

But to fulfill their true purpose, the new technologies have to be put to the service of the teacher and the curriculum, not the other way around. When computers help teachers teach, and students become active searchers for information that fits real educational objectives, true learning can take place.

The fact is, there has yet to be a computer invented that can overcome poor teaching or replace a good teacher. My technological nightmares evaporate when I recall wonderful educators whose teaching was marked by human compassion and human understanding. This is not nostalgia on my part. It is the clear comprehension of all that these capable and hard-working teachers gave me, gave so many of us.

As today's generation of talented teachers return to their classrooms this fall, be sure to let them know how much they are appreciated.

So, let's hear it for all those remarkable men and women who continue to be the best part of any classroom anywhere, any time.

last Friday was the final day for the summer program, but the children can now participate in the program at the four schools which have a Boys & Girls Club. Those include Belle Glade Elementary, Gladeview Elementary, Pioneer Park Elementary and Rosenwald Elementary.

Students can also come to Lakeshore Civic Center after school including students from Lake Shore Middle School. The center is open from 2 to 8 p.m. and the youth can enjoy activities, get help with homework and work on computers.

Carter said right now there are several stations set up for computers, but they do not have enough computers and printers for the youth.

"Any business planning to update their computer system and who would like to donate their old computers and printers would be very welcome," Carter said. He can be reached at 992-3635.

The Glades Boys & Girls Club opened as a pilot program on January 30, 1995 and serves Glades area children from 6 to 18 years of age.

Carter says the Boys & Girls Clubs of Palm Beach County is committed to offering the children of the Glades a fun, supervised, educational and affordable alternative to going home to an empty house each day after school and spending school breaks unsupervised.

Statistics from the Boys & Girls Clubs of America show the long term effects of club programs are significant. Kids who are members have higher self-esteem, better school grades and a lower high school dropout rate than children who are allowed to "fall through the cracks."

Mentors sought

Communities In Schools (CIS) and the Coalition for Children (CFC) are seeking civic minded, caring people in every aspect of our community to continue and expand the mentor program for our youth.

All that is required is a one hour a week commitment during school hours to mentor a student. One three hour training session will be scheduled to orient the volunteers.

If you can spare an hour a week to help youth of the Glades, please contact Doris Carroll from CIS at (561) 582-0820 or Herb Fine from CFC at (561) 791-1533.

Survey of homeless postponed

The Palm Beach County Homeless Coalition will conduct a census of all persons who are homeless in Palm Beach County. This count has been postponed until December.

Dr. Andrew Cherry, a professor at Barry University, will direct the census. He has directed numerous censuses of homeless people nationwide.

If you have information on where homeless people may be found, or wish to participate as an enumerator, please contact Phil Anderson at Centro Campesino, 996-3998 or Don Eiten, Director of the Homeless Coalition, at 561-375-6629.

The purpose of this census is

to create programs for a shelter, and alcohol and drug treatment, etc. for people who have no home.

Car-like Plymouth Voyager among the best minivans

By Dave Menard
Avanti NewsFeatures

A fixture in suburban drive-ways since the mid-1980s, there may be some clouds on the horizon for the minivan. There are reports that hint that some folks are trading in their "soccer-mom mobiles" for upscale cars, in an effort to shed the "suburban mom and dad" image. But if you're still looking for the unique combination of car-like ride and performance and extra room for that only a minivan can offer, a good place to start looking is the 1997 Plymouth Voyager.

Completely redesigned in 1996, the 1997 Voyager adds new base wheel covers, an upgraded anti-lock braking system, and, according to Plymouth, a quieter ride. Last year's redesign really helped the looks of the Voyager, which now has a sleeker, more rounded, more modern look to it. Accent-color body side moldings, and door handles complement the look quite nicely. The front fascia includes the Plymouth "sailing ship" badge, and the egg-crate grille. The doors, including the optional driver's-side sliding door, open easily and close smoothly.

Inside the van, there's 13.6 cubic feet of cargo space with the seven-passenger seating configuration (five passenger is standard) and if you need more room, the two bench seats in back are removable. If you need more than the 142.9 cubic feet that would provide, maybe you should look at the Grand Voyager, which adds about 26 cubic feet to the cargo space. With the seats all in, there's adequate leg room, even in the rear seating areas. No stretching room—mind you, but your knees won't be banging the seat in front of you. Head room is plentiful, even for tall drivers.

The cloth seats are comfortable and provide good support; leather is not available. The Voyager comes with cupholders throughout the van, vanity mirrors, intermittent wipers, rear window wiper and washer, storage bins throughout the van, map pockets and power outlets up front and in the rear cargo area.

The Voyager also comes with an AM/FM stereo — it's nothing to write home about, but it'll do. A cassette player is optional, but if you want a CD changer (a blessing on long trips), you need to look at the SE version of the Voyager, or a move up to a Grand Voyager SE. Separate audio controls for the rear, with headphone jacks, would be a nice option to have, but you can't get them with the Voyager.

Instrumentation is basic — speedometer, fuel level and coolant temperature. You do get warning lights for low washer fluid level, low oil pressure, charging system, door ajar and rear liftgate ajar.

Air conditioning is optional, and it's offered as part of what Plymouth calls a Family Value Package. The package includes other options like the seven-passenger seating, underseat storage drawer and rear floor silencer pad. The rear-window defroster is optional, as is the luggage rack.

The Voyager comes with a 2.4-liter 4-cylinder engine; you'd be better off considering the optional 3.0-liter 6-cylinder powerplant. The optional engine is rated at 150 horsepower — not enough to win Indy, but enough for normal minivan driving. You can pass and merge on the freeway without a problem, and the engine is relatively quiet. You can tow up to 1,000 pounds and EPA rates this engine, with the standard three-speed automatic transmission, at 19/24 mpg.

The ride is fairly smooth and car-like. The front suspension consists of iso struts with gas-charged shocks, coil springs, asymmetrical lower-control arms, and a link-type stabilizer bar. In the rear, the suspension includes a track bar, gas-charged shocks and a tubular beam axle. OK, I don't understand what that means, either, but whatever it means, it works.

When you look at a vehicle for the family, you're probably more than a little concerned with safety features, and the Voyager has them. In addition to ABS, the Voyager also comes with dual airbags, front- and rear-side guard door impact beams, child protection locks, and adjustable-height seat belts.

The 1997 Plymouth Voyager starts at about $17,000. Add the air conditioning as part of the Family Value Package, the anti-lock brakes, the bigger engine, luggage rack, conventional spare, the rear defroster and the driver's-side sliding door and you're looking at a little over $20,000.

The Voyager is a good, solid, if not flashy, minivan. If you're looking for a "soccer-mom mobile" the Plymouth Voyager is a good place to start the search.

Muscle-bound Trans Am drives like it's on steroids

By Dave Menard
Avanti NewsFeatures

I can sum up the 1997 Pontiac Firebird Trans Am in one sentence: The Great American Muscle Car is alive and well.

This Trans Am looks, acts, sounds and drives like it's on steroids, and for fans of the Trans Am, there are some new things for 1997.

The biggest change is the optional Ram Air performance package. The system was available last year for the coupe version, but for 1997 year you can get it with the convertible.

For about $3,000, you get a Ram induction system, air scoops, 16-inch chromed aluminum wheels, high performance tires, and dual oval high-polished exhaust outlets.

Not only does this package make the car look tougher, but also increases the horsepower on the 5.7-liter V8 engine from 285 to 305.

If you're buying the Trans Am for its muscle, look at this package as its exercise equipment.

The engine roars to life when you start it, and with the 6-speed transmission, the acceleration is usually quick and smooth. The transmission will allow you to skip a gear in some circumstances, and will engage a light on the instrument panel that tells you when you should do so. Of course, experienced drivers should be able to feel their way through the gears anyway.

There's a lot of engine roar coming through the dust exhaust, but it's the kind of roar you'd expect, and even demand, from a car like this. Maximum engine speed is 5800 rpm, and you'll need to put premium gas in the tank.

The Trans Am handles like a good muscle car — good road feel without feeding back every bump on the road.

The task of stopping this monster falls to 4-wheel power-assisted, and the brakes are more than up to the task.

The styling of the 1997 Trans Am is sharp and aggressive, with eye-catching lines. The exterior features composite doors, fenders, fascias, rear deck lid and spoiler. The Trans Am comes with fog lamps, concealed headlamps and body-side-body color moldings.

The rear spoiler really adds a look of speed and power to the car. Getting in and out of the Trans Am can be a little tricky for those of us over 30, but once inside, you'll feel like you're in a real sports car. The instrumentation is complete and well laid out. You get a tach, all the other gauges you'd expect, plus lights that tell you when your coolant and oil levels need to be checked. The steering wheel contains the driver's airbag and radio controls.

The seats (with optional leather) provide good support and good driving position. The seat adjustment up and back is done with a manual lever; the back and lumbar supports are power.

Head room is a bit tight, but leg room is more than adequate. The rear seats are really for hauling packages, if anything. They are certainly too small for adult passengers.

Be careful backing out of your driveway — the convertible top (when it's up) leaves you with huge blind spots. I resorted to holding my breath and backing up slowly. The trunk doesn't hold much, but you should be able to fit a few packages or a few bags of groceries in there.

Air conditioning is standard on the Trans Am convertible, as are power windows, doors, and locks, power mirrors, cruise control and rear window defogger. There's a new center console for 1997, with auxiliary power outlets, a new pull-out side cup holder and a new storage area.

The sound system is very good. The standard sound system on the Trans Am convertible is an AM/FM/cassette with an equalizer and six speakers. The CD changer is optional, and at $595, a bit pricey. The sound quality, however, is excellent. Also available this year is the Pontiac calls it "Monsoon" system, with a monstrous 500 watts.

You might be a little nervous, leaving this car in the parking lot. Pontiac apparently realizes this and has given the Trans Am a theft deterrent system. It's two systems, really.

Part Key II disables the car in any key but the proper key is used. The other half of the system includes shock sensors that detect forced entry and set off the alarm (horn and flashing lights). Plus, there's a "panic button" feature on the key fob that will set off the alarm when pressed.

New-wiper arms are part of the 1997 package. Daytime Running Lamps are standard, and instead of the commonly used low-intensity headlamps, the Trans Am uses special high-intensity elements in the parking/signal lamps.

Pontiac includes a three-year/50,000-mile warranty on the Trans Am, as well as 24-hour roadside assistance and courtesy transportation.

The Trans Am convertible starts at a little over $28,000. With the Ram Air package, the CD player, theft alarm, and leather, this snarling beast can run up as much as $34,500.

So if The Great American Muscle Car is in your plans, the 1997 Pontiac Trans-Am convertible might be the car for you.

Aggressive driving is back in town with the 1998 Ford ZX2 coupe

By Gerry Miles
Avanti NewsFeatures

Ford Motor Co. is looking for some new friends. No, not the cast from the TV show "Friends," but roughly the same demographic group of young, on-the-go, carefree gotta-have-it NOW Generation Xers to buy its 1998 Escort ZX2 coupe.

The first impression you get with the ZX2 is that it's a fine sports coupe that is not masquerading as a gussied up, rocker-panel-added version of the all-new Escort sedan that preceded it. That might have been true in the past, but this is the real deal.

The recent demise of the Probe coupe and its siblings, the Thunderbird and Cougar, make the ZX2's success even more vital to folks at Ford.

A trip to Las Vegas and subsequent drive to Death Valley, Calif., was not to bury the Escort. The Escort name is easier to build upon than introducing a new name. (Don't forget that the Escort came on the scene in 1980 billed as the "world car," replacing the state-side Fiesta, long before the term "global" was used globally.)

The old GT and similar offerings often got token sheet metal side changes, spoilers, spiffed up wheels and tires and maybe a sunroof while the rest of the car remained stock. Not the ZX2.

Under the hood is the beefier Zetec 2.0-liter 16-valve 130 horsepower engine from the Contour that provides 20 more horsepower than the stock Escort 2.0-liter motor that generates 110 horsepower. Underneath is an improved suspension with stiffer shocks and springs, bushings, a thicker front roll bar and optional 15-inch wheels on Sport models.

Although it's built upon the Escort wheelbase, the ZX2 is a tad wider and longer, with a stiffer chassis, better road response and less body roll. Steering input was also adjusted for better response to match the handling.

While it may be hard to initially differentiate the Contour SVT from its more sedate sibling, the ZX2 speaks to sporty, aggressive styling and driving. The sheet metal is all new from stem to stern.

The ZX2 is available with either a standard 5-speed manual transmission or an optional 4-speed automatic transaxle.

In its standard setting, the ZX2 is a spirited, slick-shifting coupe that will stir the emotions of those who really enjoy sliding through the gears. Each shift changes the engine pitch, providing audible feedback that matches the car's up- or down-shifting. It's just plain fun.

The automatic transmission is expectedly slower to shift and makes for less spirited driving. It's best for city commuting.

Besides the larger engine from the Contour, a quick opening throttle sensor disengages the air-conditioning compressor on acceleration, permitting full power for passing or pulling away from a stop.

Quieting the Zetec was achieved by using a ladder-frame-reinforced cast-iron block to increase bottom-end rigidity and an aluminum cylinder head for increased strength and reduced weight.

Economy is better than expected at 26 miles per gallon in city driving, 33 on the highway with the standard manual transmission. The numbers shift to 26/33 with the automatic.

Different from the other Escorts, the layout on the inside of the ZX2 is upscale and part Taurus with the round instrument pod. The wrap-around dash adds to the appearance. And caffeine commuters can remain calm: this sports coupe has three cup holders — two up front and one in back — to make sure you're able to jump-start yourself on the way to work.

It's the appointments, such as rear heater ducts, height-adjustable driver's seat, front seat position memory switch and an automatic radio volume reset, that make the "Cool" model not look stripped and the "Hot" models look hotter and sportier.

Getting into almost any 2-seater is a squeeze and the ZX2 is kind of tight, but not impossible. Rear seat room is also better than expected — even for two 6-foot fall adults.

Room up front is darn near spacious for two adults. The front bucket seats are comfortable and provide a refreshing drive. On the open road, the ZX2 can show off. With the A/C running, the coupe eagerly handles steep hills, gentle rolls and sharp corners without fanfare.

Passing power is more than adequate, raising the engine noise level with the speed before slipping into fifth gear again. The manual transmission loves the workout in mountainous sections and with the stiffened suspension, its sticks to the unfolding road with aplomb. The 15-inch wheels on the tested Sport model make a huge difference in the ZX2's holding and gripping ability.

Niceties on this new model include using gas struts to replace hinges on the deck or trunk lid to allow it to open at 90 degrees for easier picking. The third brake light can be seen, with the trunk fully raised, to any approaching traffic if the ZX2 is broken down. Anti-lock brakes, which should be standard on all cars, are a $570 option. Ford figures only 25 percent of ZX2 buyers will want ABS when the same money can be used for a top-shelf stereo system.

The new ZX2 provides a good bang for the buck, blending economy with spirited driving that hasn't been seen at Ford in a while. Consider it a car that must be driven to be appreciated.

The Car Of The Future Is Just Around The Corner

As early as the year 2003, many people may be driving a new type of car which will have the engine and fuel tank of a conventional car combined with the battery and motor of an electric car. The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) is responsible for the program to develop the Hybrid Electric Vehicle (HEV) — the car of the future!

The development of these high-fuel economy, low-emissions vehicles is a great example of a government/industry partnership. The HEV research program is providing half of the development funds needed by the country's "Big 3" automakers (GM, Ford and Chrysler) to help them meet an aggressive schedule: production-feasible propulsion systems by next year, first-generation prototypes by 2000, and then market-ready HEVs by 2003.

This development effort is being driven by the marketplace rather than mandated restrictions. Still, HEVs are expected to meet or even exceed current performance characteristics in all respects, resulting in cleaner, more efficient vehicles than we have on the road today.

This program complements the federal government's widely-publicized Partnership for a

New Generation of Vehicles program, which is a broader-based program among several federal agencies and the automotive industry, aimed at developing advanced vehicles that are three times more efficient than today's cars. The HEV program focuses more specifically on the development of a hybrid propulsion system.

One of the main driving forces for the development of HEVs is the potential reduction in vehicle emissions. Current automobiles contribute as much as half of the total U.S. atmospheric burdens of such pollutants as carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides and hydrocarbons. The different propulsion systems used in HEVs will produce lower amounts of pollutants, though the ultimate HEV would be one that runs on hydrogen, emitting only water vapor and very low levels of nitrogen oxides.

To learn more about DOE's Hybrid Vehicle Propulsion Program, you can check out their Internet page at <http://www.hevdoe.gov>, or call the Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Clearinghouse at 1-800-363-3732. Taking this True-False quiz on car leasing may dispel some commonly-held myths and help put you in the driver's seat.

1. Leasing can be complicated and confusing. (a) True (b) False?

2. When you lease you get locked in to a long-term commitment. (a) True (b) False?

3. A substantial down payment is required when you situations and offer numerous options. Using Mercedes-Benz again as an example, The First Class Lease allows customers to tailor the term of the lease between 24 and 60 months. Other flexible features include turning in, purchasing, re-leasing or lease extension at the end of the lease and various payment options including a single payment up front, multiple security deposits and con-lease. (a) True (b) False?

4. Only lease if you drive 15,000 miles per year. (a) True (b) False?

ANSWERS:

1. (b) False. Look for new "Plain English" lease documents which present information plainly and clearly. For example, The First Class Lease from Mercedes-Benz Credit Corporation was simplified, taking out the "legalese" and reducing it from six pages to only one two-sided page. Complication and confusion can be eliminated if the lessee understands the lease agreement. 2. (b) False. Some leases can be tailored to individual venient direct bank debit payment. 3. (b) False again. Most leases require little or no down payment. However, a down payment, which may be in the form of a trade-in, will reduce your monthly payments. In leasing terms, a down payment is known as a capitalized cost reduction. 4. (b) False. High-mileage drivers can build additional miles into some leases. These miles will typically be less expensive to purchase up front than the charge at the end of the lease. Unused mileage can sometimes even be refunded. Low-mileage drivers can obtain a low mileage lease with lower monthly payments.

The ZX2 is available with either a standard 5-speed manual transmission or an optional 4-speed automatic transaxle.

In its standard setting, the ZX2 is a spirited, slick-shifting coupe that will stir the emotions of those who really enjoy sliding through the gears. Each shift changes the engine pitch, providing audible feedback that matches the car's up- or down-shifting. It's just plain fun.

The automatic transmission is expectedly slower to shift and makes for less spirited driving. It's best for city commuting.

Besides the larger engine from the Contour, a quick opening throttle sensor disengages the air conditioning compressor on acceleration, permitting full power for passing or pulling away from a stop.

Quieting the Zetec was achieved by using a ladder-frame-reinforced cast-iron block to increase bottom-end rigidity and an aluminum cylinder head for increased strength and reduced weight.

Economy is better than expected at 26 miles per gallon in city driving, 33 on the highway with the standard manual transmission. The numbers shift to 25/33 with the automatic.

Different from the other Escorts, the layout on the inside of the ZX2 is upscale and part Taurus with the round instrument pod. The wrap-around dash adds to the appearance. And caffeine commuters can remain calm: this sports coupe has three cup holders — two up front and one in back — to make sure you're able to jump-start yourself on the way to work.

It's the appointments, such as rear heater ducts, height-adjustable driver's seat, front seat position memory switch and an automatic radio volume reset, that make the "Cool" model not look stripped and the "Hot" models look hotter and sportier.

Getting into almost any 2-seater is a squeeze and the ZX2 is kind of tight, but not impossible. Rear seat room is also better than expected — even for two 6-foot tall adults.

Room up front is darn near spacious for two adults. The front bucket seats are comfortable and provide a refreshing drive. The ZX2 can show off. With the A/C running, the coupe eagerly handles steep hills, gentle rolls and sharp corners without fanfare.

Passing power is more than adequate, raising the engine noise level with the speed before slipping into fifth gear again. The manual transmission loves the workout in mountainous sections and with the stiffened suspension, its sticks to the unfolding road with aplomb. The 15-inch wheels on the tested Sport model make a huge difference in the ZX2's holding and gripping ability.

Niceties on this new model include using gas struts to replace hinges on the deck or trunk lid to allow it to open at 90 degrees for easy packing. The third brake light can be seen, with the trunk fully raised, to any approaching traffic if the ZX2 is broken down. Anti-lock brakes, which should be standard on all cars, are a $570 option. Ford figures only 25 percent of ZX2 buyers will want ABS when the same money can be used for a top-shelf stereo system.

The new ZX2 provides a good bang for the buck, blending economy with spirited driving that hasn't been seen at Ford in a while. Consider it a car that must be driven to be appreciated.

Braking Should Be As Easy As ABS

It's the season of spinouts, icy patches, and snowy conditions. Driving in winter means dealing with these conditions. That's where anti-lock brake systems come in. They are a great safety device and can avoid a collision by helping drivers bring their cars under control in panic situations and allowing them to maintain control of steering. But you have to know how to use ABS.

Traditionally, most drivers in an emergency instinctively stomp on the brakes, risking wheel lock-up and loss of control. Now, anti-lock brakes like the latest generation produced by ITT Automotive, allow you to come to a safe stop and steer around obstacles. Sensors notify the ABS computer when a brake is about to lock. These same sensors can make a decision to increase hold or decrease pressure more than 100 times a second! The computer then releases and reapplies hydraulic pressure to that brake. The driver needs to remember three things: brake firmly, maintain steady pressure, and steer. Do not pump your brakes if your vehicle is equipped with ABS. The ITT Automotive Web site has more on ABS. The site provides information and a video about anti-lock brakes. In addition to information about anti-lock brake systems, the new web page provides information about innovation in the automotive industry. ITT Automotive is the largest independent maker of brakes in the world. The address of the site is <http://www.ittauto.com>.

THE SUN, Thursday, August 21, 1997, 5-8
